Dear Viking Class,

I hope that you all enjoyed the half term week. We were so lucky with the weather and so I hope you all made the most of being outdoors with your families. I spent a lot of my time gardening and going on walks with Oscar and Teddy (although I had to be careful that it wasn't too hot for them). If you'd like to tell me about what you did over the half term week please do by using ClassDojo.

One thing which I thought would be fun to do and that I'd like you all to have a go at is creating a radio broadcast all about 'staying safe in the sun'. What I mean by this is that I'd like you all to write yourself a small script all about how to stay safe in the sun and then focus on your oracy skills and specifically the way in which you use your voice to convey a message and stress something of importance. You can then record this and upload it to ClassDojo or share it with members of your family.

This week the home learning project is all about 'famous and significant people' and was emailed out to you all on Monday. It has a range of activities to complete – I was particularly excited about the prospect of building your own marble run! I wonder how many of you will be able to complete the challenge? It's great to see those of you who have already been engaging with this. In addition to this, please do remember to continue using the other online learning platforms such as Spellodrome and Mathletics as I am still setting weekly tasks to complete on there. I also really want to reiterate the value and importance of engaging in regular reading and in accessing a range of reading material. Reading is so very important and I hope that you're all still adding to your reading journals.

In other news, I came across this story at the beginning of the week which I thought you might all like to have a look at. Unfortunately, the coins won't be in general circulation but I thought it was amazing that they use augmented reality!

In previous newsletters I have made you all aware of some competitions that you may like to enter. Remember that both the RE Today and Generation Lockdown competitions are taking entries until July and so you still have time to take a look and enter if you would like to. If you do decide to enter either of these competitions it would be great if you could share your entry with me as I'd love to see it.

Enjoy the rest of your week and the lovely sunshine whilst it lasts.

Take care,

Miss Downs
