Dear Viking Class,

I hope you haven't all melted in this heat! It really has been hot hasn't it? I hope that you've all been able to be out enjoying the glorious sunshine. From having seen your work on ClassDojo, it looks as if you've all really enjoyed the Space themed learning project this week. I have had a lot of fun working on it all this week too! However, it is one of those topics where I always feel I finish learning about things with more questions than when I started! I wonder if any of you feel the same way?

I hope that you have all engaged with the summer reading challenge and the 'Silly Squad' as reading really is so very important and the library reading challenge is a great way for you to access more books digitally. Remember that this reading challenge is running all summer and so there is ample time to get involved and join in. This week in school I completed a reading bingo activity with my group and it was one of the activities suggested in the learning project for this week. I wonder what types of things you wrote down to complete your reading bingo? I've seen some very funny and imaginative ideas. As well as doing that, I have also been using some of the White Rose maths home learning videos and they are great. Therefore, if you'd like some extra maths work to do and you'd like to challenge yourself, do take a look as the videos and worksheets provided coincide with the scheme of work we follow in school. In addition to this, as I mentioned in my letter last week, the Oak National Academy are also providing some really good video lessons for a range of subjects and so it's a good idea to have a look on their website too.

The learning project for next week is themed all around 'transport'. I wonder what you all already know? Maybe you could think about some things you would like to discover and find out about in preparation for next week.

Enjoy the rest of the sunshine and the hot weather as it's set to get a little cooler next week. Enjoy your weekend and take care,

Miss Downs
